New-starter health screening

We make sure all newbies are fit and healthy for work

A pre-employment health check for new employees, so they can get stuck in straight away on their first day.

Our health screenings make sure new employees are fit for the job, and identify if any reasonable adjustments should be made before their start date. So, when it comes to their first day, they can get stuck in straight away.

We're right there every step of the way

If a screening flags up any potential health problems, we contact employers and let them know. We'll then work with HR and recommend any adjustments that could make the situation easier to manage. A health screening can also act as part of an ongoing health surveillance for an employee's medical record.
